EPISODE SUMMARIES

FIRST SEASON INTRODUCTION

The Canadian was the lightest of the three in tone.

It was also the only one that had at least three different versions. The Canadian one, the CBS Christmas after Prime Time one and the Sci-Fi Channel one is a little different. The Canadian did not have as many commercials as the Sci-Fi did so they shot some filler material, along with extra scenes. I will use the Canadian version for the review and for the cast and changes as called for the other two versions.

For the first couple of episodes there were a couple extra scenes, mostly involving nudity that were shot for the European market, Germany mainly. That quickly stopped. And will not be referenced here.

The first season cast regulars were: Gerard Way Davies as Homicide Detective Nicholas Nick Knight, Catherine Sobiech as Dr. Natalie Lambert, the medical examiner, John Kaprielian as Homicide Detective Donald G. Schmitz, Deborah Duerksen as Junete Daillorne, Nigel Bennett as Lucien LaCroix, and Gary Farmer as Captain Joe Donatello. Sandi Ross came in a few episodes later as Natalie's friend and coworker Grace Haliborn. Natalie's cat, Sydney made an appearance in only one episode.

Nick and Natalie have known each other for quite a while as the series starts. Everyone has been at their job for years.

The Canadian and American viewers were given a totally different view of Nick and Natalie's relationship. In the Sci-Fi they watched quite different versions of the episodes. The Canadian has a more playful, closer relationship than the Americans did. Many Nick and Natalie scenes were changed for the American version.

LaCroix was not a part of Nick's everyday life this season. He was seen only in flashback during all but two episodes.

There were several interesting triangles in the series. Each triangle featured Nick in the middle: The vampire family - LaCroix, G.G., Zane; His mortal friends who were like a family to him - Nimble, Nick, Schmitz; The women in his life - Natalie, Nick, Junete. The most codes in his life - Schmitz, Nick, LaCroix. There was a excellent balance between the vampire and mortal worlds.
