The Mormon Church is a Christian denomination founded in the early 19th century by Joseph Smith. The church teaches that it is the one true church on earth, and that its leaders are prophets who receive direct revelation from God. Mormons believe that the Bible is the word of God, but they also believe that other scriptures, such as the Book of Mormon, are also authoritative.

There are many reasons why people leave the Mormon Church. Some people leave because they no longer believe in the church's teachings.

Others leave because they are unhappy with the church's culture or leadership. Still others leave because they have experienced trauma or abuse within the church.

Leaving the Mormon Church can be a difficult and painful process. Mormons are often taught that leaving the church is a sin, and they may face rejection from their family and friends. They may also struggle to find a new community or support system.

However, many people who leave the Mormon Church find that they are happier and more fulfilled after leaving. They may find a new sense of purpose and belonging in a new community. They may also find that they are able to live more authentically and freely.

No Longer Mormon is a book that tells the stories of people who have left the Mormon Church. The book is a valuable resource for anyone who is considering leaving the church, or who has already left the church and is looking for support.
