On February 8, 2007, Anna Nicole Smith was found dead in a hotel room in Hollywood, Florida. She was just 39 years old. Her death was ruled an accidental overdose, but the circumstances surrounding her death have always been shrouded in mystery.

Now, for the first time, her closest friends and family speak out about the untold story behind her untimely demise. In a new book, "The Anna Nicole Smith Tragedy: The Untold Story," they reveal the shocking details of her final days and the events that led to her death.

According to the book, Smith was in a downward spiral for years leading up to her death. She was addicted to drugs and alcohol, and she was struggling to cope with the death of her son, Daniel, in 2006.

In the months leading up to her death, Smith was taking a dangerous cocktail of prescription drugs. She was also using illegal drugs, such as cocaine and heroin.

On the night of her death, Smith was staying at the Seminole Hard Rock Hotel and Casino in Hollywood, Florida. She was with her boyfriend, Howard K. Stern, and her lawyer, Howard K. Stern.

At some point during the night, Smith took a fatal dose of methadone. She was found dead in her hotel room the next morning.

The book reveals that Smith's death was not an isolated incident. It was the culmination of years of addiction and self-destruction.

Smith's friends and family are hoping that her story will serve as a warning to others. They want people to know that addiction is a serious disease that can have deadly consequences.
